The Title IV-E Student Day is a one-day conference designed to provide current and former Title IV-E students with the opportunity to network with peers and learn clinical and theoretical approaches utilized in the field of child welfare but not necessarily taught during the traditional academic calendar.

This event is meant to stimulate professional relationships within a richly diverse population. We hope that these relationships and the discussions generated will carry over to current and future work environments.

The Title IV-E Student Day is also an opportunity for future social workers to hear from speakers representing a wide range of disciplines who generously share their depth and breadth of knowledge and experience.
